CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY TO BE PROMOTED

C. D. Harrington, Advocate National Body At Winnipeg Rally

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10.—C. D. Harrington, Montreal, president of the Canadian Construction Association, today advocated before the organization's annual convention formation of a national body to promote the construction industry's welfare. He addressed the three-day convention.

The proposed national body would represent every section of the industry and associated trades. It would have permanent offices in Ottawa with subsidiary departments in each province.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

Mr. Harrington said the duties of the construction industry were regarded by some as the main reason for the continued widespread unemployment. The industry condition was a serious national problem and had been lacking as such in the United States and Great Britain.

He outlined the organization and constitution of the body, and suggested that the industry should be organized as a similar body in the United States and Great Britain.

COSTS ARE LOW

The President declared the public should realize that construction costs at present were the lowest in the history of the industry. He suggested that the industry should be organized as a similar body in the United States and Great Britain.

French sources reiterated that Premier Daladier now was stronger politically than in the previous two months and that he was holding firm to his policy against cession of "single lots" of French territory. France let it be known, however, that the Daladier administration was not prepared to make any concessions in the matter of territorial cession.

Though asserting there was no danger such doctrine would reach wide popular support in either Great Britain or the United States, Mr. Eden said it was not enough "simply to proclaim protest" for Germany. We have got to have that nation based upon our conception of justice can defend itself against the forces of aggression.

C.N.R. BURDEN OVERBALANCED BY ITS VALUE

Great Instrument Of National Development Research Chief Says

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—S. W. Fairweather, chief of research and development of the Canadian National Railway, told the Young Men's Canadian Club last night that the burden of the country was greatly overbalanced by its value as an instrument for national development and public service.

Members of the Canadian people were served exclusively by the C.N.R., he said, and on closer investigation it might be seen that most of the territory served solely by the railway "is a land of pioneers of Canada on which the country's development depends."

CAPITAL VALUE
The Canada spent in railway construction, he estimated, national capital wealth of $10 billion had been created.

Mr. Fairweather advanced the suggestion that it would be most surprising had the national system shown a profit. It was the only great asset in the country and still acts in the capacity by opening new territories to industrial and agricultural development.

"The railway, so far as land transport is concerned, is the only instrument of carrying on mass transport cheaply enough to allow to the wide interior of the country development which has characterized growth of Canada as a modern, productive nation. This is an impressive statement, but when you consider that the railway is the only people of Canada are served exclusively by the Canadian National Railway, it serves exclusively is made-up of a tremendous mass of the country's development of the country depends, the need of some better measure of value of the enterprise than its operation at a profit becomes obvious."

CONDITIONS IN 1930
At this point might be asked, Mr. Fairweather amplified, that if the Canadian National plays such a large part in the country's development and substantially all other railway in Canada, why does it have a deficit? To answer that question he drew attention to the conditions which prevailed when the Canadian National was organized and financially impoverished private-owned roads. In the year 1920, the Canadian National was operating at $30,000,000 and this figure did not include interest charges upon any of the outstanding capital.

"It was precisely on account of the interest charges that the Canadian National was unable to show a profit that they fell into the hands of the government and became a national asset to the Canadian National system," he concluded.

"This is a point which those who criticize the Canadian National conveniently avoid discussing. There is a second fact which is not mentioned by the critics and is a considerable portion of the system presented a problem in national development which was unsatisfactory as a business enterprise that construction and operation of the Canadian National was undertaken, in the first instance, was a government measure. I may say that since 1923 the Canadian National has always paid its operating expenses and has not had any which have arisen since that time have always been paid from taxes levied and independent of the volume of business done."

CANADA UNITY OBJECTIVE OF
KIWANIS CLUBS

REGINA, Jan. 10.—An appeal for a "true national spirit" was made by Ewald J. McGee, district governor, when he addressed to members of the Regina Kiwanis club that a campaign for Canada unity would be a "distinctly objective" of Kiwanis clubs in the dominion for 1939.

"I mean the kind of national spirit that is prepared to recognize our mutual difficulties prepared to rectify injustices and to discuss our problems around a common table in the same good faith and spirit that characterized the fathers of Confederation," said Governor McGee.

Well At 3 Years

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—Dr. J. S. Moore of North Sydney, N.S., writing in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Journal, says that the smallest baby born that lived in Canada was in a country district near North Sydney.

Dr. Moore said the smallest infant to survive previously recorded weighed 21.6 ounces at birth. He said the baby, Sydney, was born at the North Sydney hospital on the night of Jan. 18, 1917. The baby, the 28-year-old mother's third, was two months premature.

FEAR OF WAR HOLDING BACK BETTER TIMES

Unemployment Not Great Problem In Canada
Gardiner Avers

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—Unemployment is not the greatest problem in Canada, Hon. James Gardiner, federal minister of agriculture, told the Montreal Mercantile Association last night.

"If the peace of the world could be ensured for 12 months the unemployment problem of this country and of the world would sink into insignificance," he said.

Asked to explain how he meant that "Fundamentally unemployment is a problem of the mind," Gardiner said that with fear and mistrust, every country was trying to make itself self-sufficient, and that some countries were living on war ration to ensure self-sufficiency.

"If peace were assured in the world, we could sell our wheat, bring money into the country to produce jobs throughout Canada," he said. "If peace were assured, Britain would be using some of her greatest financial resources to reconstruct Canada's great natural resources."

"In Western Canada there is a great potential source for the country's growth. Half the mineral wealth of the world is in the West, and the Rocky Mountains, but there are great natural resources in the West which would create great wealth."

Pair Hurl Hot Epithets

The mayor and aldermen ducked sharply at Monday night's council a member of the audience who had submissions to make.

At the centre of the crowded chamber and declared he wished to speak "on are not getting fair treatment."

"There are lots of British subjects

The man interrupted Al. Ogilvie

"It is as good as you are," a shrill

as belonging to the speaker's wife.

"I am not a member of this council," she said, "and I have no

Council agreed and, when the man was ordered to sit down, he protested, the man was assisted from the chamber by the constable.

"This is what we fought for,"

he shouted.

"You men go to war while your fellows stay home and grab the

She passed by the constable and shrieked, "You dirty scoundrel I

CITY TO HEAR KELLY'S PLEA IN SPECIAL MEET

Evidence In Hearing Of Ex-Constable To Be Publicized

City council will call a special meeting to hear the appeal of John Kelly against his dismissal from the city police force, the session is to be arranged as a special session for the purpose of hearing the appeal. The former constable was dismissed January 2 by commissioners for giving false statements to his senior officers in connection with the shooting, declared accidental, of Ole Peterson, taxi driver, early Christmas morning. Kelly's post record also stood against him.

The decision was made unanimously by council Monday night when Kelly and his counsel, R. D. T. K.C., appeared to present an appeal. The former constable was dismissed January 2 by commissioners for giving false statements to his senior officers in connection with the shooting, declared accidental, of Ole Peterson, taxi driver, early Christmas morning. Kelly's post record also stood against him.

Mr. Tipton stated that, while the police board had the right to report and had pleaded guilty, "the board was not the master of the time that he did not know what he was saying."

The council chamber was packed in anticipation of the hearing of the Kelly appeal, a junior audience arrived at 6:30 p.m. and waited until the meeting started at eight o'clock.

Mr. Tipton repeated his earlier statement that he had requested evidence of the press, but before commissioners because he understood all disciplinary hearings were closed. He stated that the client were agreeable to the press having copies of the report.

Mr. Tipton stated that he did not recall the press conference. Mayor Fry told the council, "but just the same, commissioners are not submitting to the idea that all disciplinary hearings should be attended by the press."

SHOULD LAY CHARGE
"I would like to say," Ald. Blair Paterson interrupted, "I cannot remember of any previous cases of Edmonton being involved in a brawl in which a man is shot without a criminal charge being laid. I think the police should have laid a criminal charge against Kelly. If it is not a shooting accident, he would be cleared."

"There was no brawl there, if we can believe the evidence at the hearing," Mayor Fry said. The council's version of the case was that Kelly was discharged from his service revolver, was accepted by commissioners, they said afterwards. If I were in Kelly's shoes," said Ald. D. K. Knott, "I like to have the case cleared in court."

He said that the report by commissioners was not sufficiently full, but that he was not a lawyer. "I think the council should have a final report of appeal from the police board," he said. "I think the council should have a final report of appeal from the police board," he said. "I think the council should have a final report of appeal from the police board," he said.

PREVIOUS RECORD
Commissioners listed three previous convictions against Kelly as follows:

April 13, 1932, deprived of six months' authority for supplying incorrect information in date of birth on enlistment.

Dec. 28, 1932, suspended without three days' pay for insubordination.

April 1, 1933, reduced to casual class, transferable from April 1 to Dec. 31, 1933, for coming into possession of a police officer's uniform.

VETERANS SEE MANY CHANGES IN TELEPHONES

Five Employees Recall Improvements Over 30-Year Period

Many changes in telephone work have been witnessed by five members of the Alberta Veterans' Association, who have completed thirty years in the telephone communication business, but the coming year is expected to produce even more startling developments.

LABOR HOURS FOR TRUCKERS IS DISCUSSED

Highway Traffic Boards' Convention Studies Problems Here

Regulation of hours of work and working conditions of the operators of public service and commercial vehicles found the basis of a discussion featuring the convention of highway traffic boards of western provinces, held at the Macdonald hotel on Monday. The party continued on Tuesday.

Representatives of the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia highway traffic boards met with the Alberta board to discuss the problem of making uniform regulations and conditions in the highway traffic boards.

It is expected that the subject will be dealt with again before the conference ends, after which the recommendations which may be developed will be submitted to the highway traffic boards.

Interpretation of the term "commercial vehicle" was another matter raised under discussion in 1938.

ROUTES
Still another matter which caused some discussion was the time limit of varying and hours of interstate commercial vehicles.

Location of the number of contracts entered into by one operator was another matter raising questions.

The operation of the highway traffic boards is a matter of interest to the public.

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly
A Year's Work
Major Progress
Alberta Aids

It was just about a year ago now that the average man in western Canada first heard about Ducks Unlimited, the business organization of U.S. and Canadian sportsmen that was founded to save water fowl habitat from becoming a thing of the past on the North American continent. The next summer men said little attention to what he did with this body with the water birds. It was only a few weeks later that the birds who roamed that tremendous waste were in the water for western Canada from this organization.

Today Ducks Unlimited can look back on its first season of actual conservation work with justifiable pride. It is not too much to say that it has turned the tide in the affairs of ducks and geese from back in the dark of time from the Sunset Trail to the buffalo, Great Auk and will get followed.

Ducks Unlimited set out to get the greatest possible results with its first season's work. It was a first field project with the water birds. The conservation of two great marsh areas in the St. Lawrence Marsh near Kingston, Saskatchewan, and Big Grass Marsh near Lake Winnipeg. Ducks Unlimited plans to spend approximately $200,000 in these two marsh areas and field projects during the next year. This is a big job and will take some time to complete.

Another major effort was made in streamlining and coordinating the annual estimates in the private provinces to eliminate cross and confusion. The annual estimates of the provinces are now being given to the Ducks Unlimited in a single form. This will save a great deal of time and money. In 1949 there were 600,000 ducks and geese in the St. Lawrence Marsh near Kingston, Saskatchewan, and Big Grass Marsh near Lake Winnipeg. Ducks Unlimited plans to spend approximately $200,000 in these two marsh areas and field projects during the next year. This is a big job and will take some time to complete.

By 1950 the number of ducks and geese in the St. Lawrence Marsh near Kingston, Saskatchewan, and Big Grass Marsh near Lake Winnipeg is expected to increase to 800,000. Ducks Unlimited plans to spend approximately $200,000 in these two marsh areas and field projects during the next year. This is a big job and will take some time to complete.

Alberta Not Forgotten

Alberta has been a major factor in the success of Ducks Unlimited. The province has provided a large area of water fowl habitat. Ducks Unlimited plans to spend approximately $200,000 in these two marsh areas and field projects during the next year. This is a big job and will take some time to complete.

Progress has also been made on several projects in the northern part of Alberta. The province has provided a large area of water fowl habitat.
